ROMANS 1 BY 1. AUGUSTA TRAIANA ET TERRITORIUM

Abstract: The author presents the results of a research on the population of Augusta Traiana. More precisely, it continues the larger collective project Romans 1 by 1, by collecting and interpreting the data for the above-mentioned Roman city. As such, the paper will focus on the epigraphically attested quantitative data on the population of Augusta Traiana, and on the qualitative data, covering the period between the first epigraphic attestations and up to the 3rd century AD. The work includes a prosopographical catalogue with the epigraphically attested population.

Keywords: epigraphy, prosopography, society, networks, Augusta Traiana.

1. INTRODUCTION

Studies on Augusta Traiana have been concerned, among others, with the history of the city,¹ its religious life,² or the numismatic evidence.³ Prosopographical and population studies⁴ have been written at a smaller scale, regarding for example specific individuals,⁵ onomastic specificities,⁶ or linguistic features.⁷ As such, the study of the population of Augusta Traiana has left room for more research, our intention being to provide an outlook on it with the help of new methodologies (through the use of a prosopographical database, and the use of Gephi for network analyses and visualisation).

From a methodological point of view, the first step of this endeavour implied the selection and insertion of all the inscriptions that provide information on the population of Augusta Traiana (from the first epigraphic attestations and up to the 3rd century AD) in the prosopographical database Romans 1 by 1, this step having as goal to provide open-access to the information for anyone interested in accessing it, specialist or not. Considering the goal of our initiative to focus on the population, some exceptions have been made, more precisely excluded were those inscriptions that record emperors and the legati Augusti pro praetore,⁸ as well as the evidence from the extremely fragmentary inscriptions and from those inscriptions that do not render with certainty evidence on the population, or the attestations of personal names coming from amphoras, as they do not necessarily attest local craftsmanship,⁹ therefore not persons who were located temporarily or permanently at Augusta Traiana. Excluded have been also the persons from Beroe/Augusta Traiana attested in other places of the Roman world, as for example the Thracians mentioned in inscriptions from Rome who were active in the Roman army.¹⁰ Further on, the next step implied the preparation of the prosopographical catalogue, based on which further analyses and interpretations were made.

2. OVERVIEW OF THE DATA

The Roman city of Augusta Traiana (mentioned in inscriptions as Αὐγούστη Τραιανή,¹¹ ἡ Τραιανέων πόλις,¹² ἡ λαμπροτάτη Τραιανέων πόλις,¹³ ἡ λαμπρὰ καὶ ἐλευθέρα Τραιανέων πόλις,¹⁴ or ἡ λαμπροτάτη Θρακῶν Τραιανέων πόλις¹⁵) was founded by the emperor Trajan in the nearby of the Thracian settlement Beroe,¹⁶ becoming the second largest centre of the province Thrace (province created in AD 46), after Philippopolis.¹⁷ As in the case of many ancient cities, Augusta Traiana is located under a modern city, in this case Stara Zagora, which makes the archaeological research more difficult. In what concerns its organisation, it had just like any other Greek city¹⁸ a council and an assembly, the πρωτος ἄρχων being at the head of the boule, the official documents being written in Greek,¹⁹ the “official language of the Roman province”.²⁰

Beginning with the earliest attestation and up to the 3rd century AD, Augusta Traiana has provided 276 inscriptions that record relevant data on the population that was located there temporarily or permanently. There are only a few inscriptions dating to the period previous to the beginning of the 2nd century AD, but we should also take into account the fact that a high number of inscriptions could not be dated. As such, from the available dataset, most inscriptions come from the 2nd-3rd century AD. As in any other similar approaches, the real number of the population is impossible to give as the epigraphic sources provide only a percentage of the overall number, gap which could be filled through further archaeological investigations. Even though the epigraphic sources do not reflect the real number of the population, they provide an overview on a segment of the population that expressed itself epigraphically. From a quantitative point of view, most of the inscriptions are votive, followed at a significant distance by honorary inscriptions and then by funerary inscriptions (see Fig. 2). Among these there are also some verse inscriptions,²¹ N. Sharankov proving that those from the 2nd-3rd century AD “were made by the same stone-cutter’s workshop” and “that the poet(s) who wrote the metrical inscriptions and the stone-cutter(s) worked together”.²² The funerary inscriptions are rather few, especially when we take into account that they are, in other ancient cities from the nearby province of Lower Moesia, either predominant, or the best represented. The funerary inscriptions present us with rather limited information on the profile of the persons whom they attest, information such as the personal name or tria/duo nomina, the patronymic and maybe the name of some family members, respectively the persons who was responsible for dedicating them the monument.

3. PEOPLE OF AUGUSTA TRAIANA

For the period between the 4th/3rd century BC and the 3rd century AD, the inscriptions record a number of 525 “active”/ “primary”²³ persons and in total, comprising the “secondary” persons there are 795 persons at Augusta Traiana and in its territory. This is a relatively high number, comparable to the population from other major ancient cities, e.g. from the nearby province of Lower Moesia, or even from Thrace.

The gender distribution (see Fig. 3) is not surprising, the large majority of inscriptions attest the male population, while the female population is highly underrepresented (they represent only around 4% of the population). There are only a few persons whose gender could not be established due to the fragmentary state of the inscriptions. In total there are 37 female inhabitants of Augusta Traiana and its territory, and some of them are Roman citizens and are part of the elite. Their status as Roman citizens is visible through the tria/duo nomina, but only three of the 12 nomina are those of Αὐρηλία, the other nomina point to them having received the citizenship prior to the edict of Caracalla: Ἰουλία (1), Σεπτιμία (1), Βαλερία/Οὐαλερία/Valeria (3), Ulpia (1), Satria (1), Κλαυδία (1), Φλαβία (1) and some point to the women possibly originating from other provinces (western and eastern). Only one of the women has a tria nomina: Λουκία Σεπτιμία Βάσσα ἡ καὶ Νυμφοδόρα, who was the daughter of Αὐρήλιος Σεπτίμιος Βάσσος [ὁ καὶ] Δημοσθένης, and wife of Μάρκος Αὐρήλιος Ἀπολλόδορος.

Among these women there are four Imperial priestesses: Οὐαλερία Φρόντυλλα, Σεπτιμία Σείτη, Λουκία Σεπτιμία Βάσσα ἡ καὶ Νυμφοδόρα and Αὐρηλία Μάρκελλα. Σεπτιμία Σείτη was “the worthiest high priestess” who was in charge of organising gladiatorial games, her son-in-law, Αὐρήλιος Δημόφιλος, a high priest himself, paying himself for her statue, but as in other cases, honouring her publicly was probably a “promotional strategy of her family”.²⁴ While Σεπτίμια Σεΐτη might have been part of the Romanised local elite, based on the onomastic her son-in-law might have belonged to the immigrants from Asia Minor who became part of the elite.²⁵ The high priestess Λουκία Σεπτίμια Βάσσα ἡ καὶ Νυμφοδόρα was the daughter of Αὐρήλιος Σεπτίμιος Βάσσος [ὁ καὶ] Δημοσθένης – σύναρχος, and wife of Μάρκος Αὐρήλιος Απολλόδορος who was a high priest himself. The priestess was named as ματρώνη,²⁶ this being the first attestation of the title in Thrace and Moesia Inferior.²⁷ There are two monuments mentioning the couple, monuments that seem to originate from the same workshop.²⁸ While the tria nomina of the father and daughter point to their Romanisation at a certain degree, their Greek names show their Hellenic identity and maybe even an origin from Asia Minor.²⁹ Αὐρηλία Μάρκελλα daughter of Βιθύκενθος was just like her husband Μάρκος Αὐρήλιος Τήρης son of Σκέλης, a high priestess, and based on the onomastic and patronymic they both seem to be the first generation of Roman citizens from their family and it is very likely that they belonged to wealthy families who improved over the generations their social standing.³⁰

These are examples of women whose social standing are extraordinary, consequently we know more about their lives, but on most women, we have very limited information, being mentioned for their role of wives and mothers (such as Ἐπιτησκος daughter of Δορζίνθης; wife of Πουφινανός; mother of Ροῦφος, or Κανδιδέα; wife of Διοφάνης; mother of Οὐαλεντίνος etc.). Besides women, the inscriptions of Augusta Traiana provide very limited information on the children who lived there (only one such case, see below), who can be identified with precision especially when the age at death is mentioned. Invisible are also the slaves. These gender, age and juridical categories are also mostly invisible in the iconography of the monuments. Among these representations we mention the iconography on the funerary stele of Αὐρηλία Κρισπεῖνα daughter of Τουλιανός and her daughter Κελσῖνα who are represented on it. The funerary banquet is represented on another stele, the one commemorating Ζε[---] the husband of an ignota.³¹ Another representation is on the funerary monument of Απολλόδορος son of Ταταζία husband of ignota,³² the iconography renders a woman along with two children, possibly a boy and a girl. As in this case, the iconography is not necessarily in accordance with the text, they render funerary motifs not always demographical realities. In other cases, such as in the case of the funerary monument dedicated to Ἐπιτησκος daughter of Δορζίνθης, wife of Πουφινανός and mother of Ροῦφος,³³ the relief is in accordance with the text of the inscription, a woman being represented on it.

When considering the profile of the population, age is an important component, but at Augusta Traiana age is rarely mentioned, there are only four instances in which the (approximate) number of years at death is mentioned: 12 years,³⁴ 40 years,³⁵ 43 years³⁶ and 70 years.³⁷ This is a very limited sample, but considering the number of funerary inscriptions and their overall rarer occurrence it is not surprising.

Despite the laconic character of most inscriptions, some do offer glimpses also on the death of the population. For example, a person named Γοργίας died in the 3rd century AD at the hands of “barbarians”.³⁸ Similar cases of personal and collective tragedies are better epigraphically attested in other provinces,³⁹ where not only “barbarians” threatened the lives and well fortune of the population, but also latrones. Terms such as “barbarians” and hostes are “usually associated with barbarians raiding the province”.⁴⁰ “The Costoboci along with the more general term of barbarians are the most commonly pointed at as responsible for personal tragedies, not only collective tragedies”.⁴¹ There are also more fortunate instances in which one survives when at the hands of “barbarians”, as an inscription from Moesia Inferior, more precisely from Preslav, points: the inscription records the fact that a beneficiarius consularis of the Legio I Italica Alexandriana was involved in the bellum Bosporanum but safely returned multis periculis in barbarico liberatus.^{42,43} On another person attested at Augusta Traiana,⁴⁴ whose name is missing we know that has survived to a life-threatening event, making a dedication following this. While the inscription does not specify more on the causes and possible aggressors, it cannot be excluded for him to have been the victim of the Costoboci, or of an attack by some latrones.

Regarding their lives, a limited number of individuals (12) left evidence on the profession that they had. These are limited instances, that give us evidence for the following professionals: two gladiators (one of them was possibly a retarius: [---]ος ὁ καὶ Λεύκασπις; ignotus);⁴⁵ three physicians: a ἱητρός (Ἀλέξανδρος son of Διόλης);⁴⁶ a medicus of the cohors II Lucensium (Auluzenus);⁴⁷ and a medicus (Δημοσθένης);⁴⁸ a γραμματεὺς (Αὐρήλιος Δημοσθένης son of Δημοσθένης);⁴⁹ a κανιδιδάρις – respectively a baker of white bread (Ηρακλιανός);⁵⁰ a playwright (Νευκίας; father of Ηρωδιανός);⁵¹ an οινέμπορος {τῆς Δακίας} (Αὐρήλιος Σαβεῖνος son of Θεοφίλος);⁵² a κουκουλάρις – a manufacturer of hats (Φλάβις);⁵³ an οἰκονόμος (Σειγῆρος)⁵⁴ and two actuarii (Μάρκος Οὐλπίος Ἀρχέλαος and Ἰουλιανός).⁵⁵ Overall, they provide only a truncated perspective on the occupational landscape at Augusta Traiana. Except for the representation on two monuments, on the monument mentioning [---]ος ὁ καὶ Λεύκασπις⁵⁶ and on the one mentioning an ignotus,⁵⁷ there are no other monuments with representations of professionals, but this is generally rarely attested in the ancient world.⁵⁸ Despite not having epigraphic evidence, there is archaeological evidence attesting various local artefacts pointing to other professionals.

As mentioned, among the people present at Augusta Traiana we have gladiators, but also an athlete.⁵⁹ Here, gladiatorial combats⁶⁰ and various races were organised as the epigraphic and iconographic monuments point, as well as the architectural evidence of the city. There is evidence on the organiser of a gladiatorial game, namely Σεπτίμια Σεΐτη, but mention is made also of supporters of gladiators, respectively the οἱ σκουτλάριοι.⁶¹ We know the personal names of two gladiators [---]ος ὁ καὶ Λεύκασπις⁶² and an ignotus,⁶³ and that of an athlete, [Μάρκος] Αὐρήλιος Φρόντων son of Διοφάνης⁶⁴ who was not only an athletic winner twice (at Olympia and Haleia), but also a Θρακάρχης and Εὐρωπάρχης (around AD 297-313),⁶⁵ receiving therefore some of the highest titles. A bronze statue was even dedicated to the latter on behalf of the city for his achievements. Besides games, Augusta Traiana could also host plays as a theatre existed here, and as Νευκίας father of Ἡρωδιανός⁶⁶ wrote “pleasant mimes with elegance” – according to the honorary verse inscription dedicated to him by the city and possibly written by him.⁶⁷

A segment of the population at Augusta Traiana is also represented by the military personnel (active or retired)⁶⁸ but it is not so well represented, as Thrace was a demilitarised province. Among the veterans⁶⁹ who settled all along the centuries we know of the existence of a centurio and of an imaginifer, the latter belonging to the legio XXX

Ulpia Victrix. These veterans who settled in the city or in its territory worshipped divinities such as Jupiter, Concordia or Victoria. Some veterans of the legio XXX Ulpia Victrix even funded and elevated a temple of Augustus. The active military personnel pertained to various ranks, from miles/στρατιώτης to centurio ordinarius; eques; carcerarius; beneficiarius; tribunus; decurio; praefectus cohortis; the units are also varied: cohors I Cisipadensium; cohors II Bracaraugustanorum; cohors II Lucensium; cohors II Mattiacorum; cohors II Numidarum; ala [---]; legio [---]; legio XI Claudia. Among the military personnel we should of course mention Μαρκιανός, the commander of Gallienus who repelled the invasion of Goths and Herulians in AD 267-268, and whom was honoured by a λογιστής (curator civitatis) also by the name of Μαρκιανός, through a bronze statue. The same commander was honoured also through an inscription from Philippopolis.⁷⁰

Another segment of the population is represented by the foreigners, whom can be identified not only through the onomastic and origin markers, but also through the worshipped deities. As such, we notice the presence of persons whom came from the East and along with them they brought also their cults, such as that of Jupiter Dolichenus, Sarapis, Sabazius or Harpocritos. Some of them mention their origin, as for example Δημήτριος son of Φωτογένης who was from Nikaia, but who settled early on at Augusta Traiana. His funerary epigram testifies to his level of education,⁷¹ but we cannot tell more on his profile and on his life at Augusta Traiana. From Asia Minor there are other immigrants, namely the high priest Οὐλπίος Ἱερώνυμος who was from Nikomedia and who is attested with his wife, Οὐαλερία Φρόντυλλα. From Asia Minor, but from a later timeframe, is also Αὐρήλιος Δημήτριος son of Ἀποφύς who was πρῶτος ἄρχων at Augusta Traiana. Other persons came to Augusta Traiana from closer (Στατίλιος Μάξιμος was from Perinthos, Αὐρήλιος Πρίμος Ἄστεος ὁ καὶ Ἰούλιος was a βουλευτής τῆς Δακίας Σεπτίμια Πορολίσσου⁷²), or farther places (Μουκιανός was from γαῖα Παννονίης; Κλαύδιος Φρόντων was a βουλευτής πόλεως Ἀκυνκησίου and a πραγματευτής), other identified themselves as being Ἕλληνες (Νάρκισσος son of Ζήνων and Λολλιανός son of Αουῖτος), or Σύρος (Αὐρήλιος Σαβεῖνος son of Θεοφίλος, οινέμπορος τῆς Δακίας). Other persons might be identified based on their onomastic, for example, as N. Sharankov points,⁷³ from the western provinces come Αἰμίλιος and his wife Σαβίνα, as well as Κούαρτος Ἀμβείβιος Ροῦφος and his wife Σεκοῦνδα. Even though from a later period, to these latter examples we might also add Ἄττιος Τερτιανός and his wife Πηγείνα.

Furthermore, the inscriptions allow us to easily identify the members of the elite,⁷⁴ for example the Θρακάρχης, ἀρχιερεὺς τοῦ κοινοῦ τῆς ἐπαρχείας, the ἀρχιερεὺς, the πρῶτος ἄρχων, the βουλευτής, the γερουσιαστής, the πραγματευτής.⁷⁵ The Θρακάρχης⁷⁶ is the head of the Thracian koinon, and among the persons from Augusta Traiana who had this position we mention Τίτος Φλάουϊος Δίνης son of Σκέλης, who was ἱερεὺς ἀπὸ προγόνων διὰ βίου and the first ἀρχιερεὺς τοῦ κοινοῦ τῆς ἐπαρχείας. Based on his cognomen and patronymic he was of Thracian descent,⁷⁷ but was part of a Romanised family.⁷⁸ This mentioning is according to N. Sharankov the “earliest evidence, though indirect, about the existence of a provincial council”.⁷⁹ Two other thracarchs attested at Augusta Traiana are Βίθυς (AD 196, 202, or 214) and [Μᾶρκος] Αὐρήλιος Φρόντων son of Διοφάνης⁸⁰ (around AD 297-313⁸¹). The latter has gone from a professional athlete to occupying the most important positions in Thrace, and further on, his son, Τίτος Φλάβιος Διοφάνης, was an eques. Βίθυς was not only Θρακάρχης but also πρῶτος ἄρχων, therefore he was a remarkable member of society. As the inscription is incomplete right before the cognomen we cannot tell the nomen and eventually the praenomen of Βίθυς, but as the inscription is dated after AD 214 he was at least an Αὐρήλιος. As mentioned, besides them, the high priests were significant members of the elite and attested are the: ἀρχιερεὺς τοῦ κοινοῦ τῆς ἐπαρχείας – the high priest of the province,⁸² the ἀρχιερεὺς – responsible for the imperial cult, as well as the ἀρχιερεὺς δι’ ὅπλων – who seems to be connected to the organisation of gladiatorial games.⁸³ All of them were representatives of the wealthy local elite. Some of them, such as Οὐλπίος Πόπλιος Εὐκράτης were honoured with a statue, in this case the statue was elevated by his sons.

In what concerns the population attested in the territory of Augusta Traiana, the population from the emporion Pizos stands out due to the extensive inscription on the reform of the statute of the emporion Pizos⁸⁴ and edict of the Roman governor Q. Sicinnius Clarus.⁸⁵ As it results from the inscription, that records the residents, and as previously underlined by D. Boteva “there were two different categories of settlers. The first were called the εὐδοκιμοῦντες [---]. The second category of settlers were poor peasants, attracted by the promised privileges [---]”.⁸⁶ The emporion had at its head a τόπαρχος βουλευτής who was elected but by the ἄρχοντες of Augusta Traiana.⁸⁷ This inscription reveals also some of the limits of the research, as the high frequency of homonymous personal names and patronymic can certainly lead to a less precise identification of persons. It is very likely that some of the patronymics render the same person, respectively the inscriptions probably record a high number of brothers, and sons and fathers, but as we have no further information on their profiles except their mostly common personal names/patronymics we cannot state with certitude their personal relations, as such they have been recorded as new entries.

4. NETWORKS AT AUGUSTA TRAIANA AND BEYOND

It comes of course as no surprise that the familial networks are the best represented, and besides the father – son relationship, which is the best represented due to the mentioning of the patronymic, the following most numerous type of relation is that between husbands and wives. Other rarer types of family relations are those of grandfather/grandson, brother and sister. Besides these, between some individuals there are relations which could not be established with certitude due to the fragmentary state of the inscriptions, or due to the fact that the text of the inscription is very laconic in nature, among these cases we mention the unspecified relationship between Ἑρμιόνη and Συνέρως, that between Ἡλιόδωρος and Φλάβιος, or that between the eques Marius Celsus and Marcus son of Traidacus etc. Unreadable relationships are to be found in the case of Ποτάμων son of Μουκιανός and an ignotus, or between Ροιμητάκης and Σεουήρος.

Personal networks could be extended through religious and professional connections, but also by undertaking official positions at the level of the city, or by joining private associations. The members of the elite were the best-connected persons, with extensive networks, this can be assumed in the case of [Μᾶρκος] Αὐρήλιος Φρόντων son of Διοφάνης and this through his former stance of athlete, and his positions of Θρακάρχης and Εὐρωπάρχης. But extensive networks could have had also some professionals like Αὐρήλιος Σαβεῖνος son of Θεοφίλος who was an οἰνέμπορος {τῆς Δακίας}, respectively a negotiator vinarius Daciscus,⁸⁸ and a priest of Dolichenus, and among whose connections is Αὐρήλιος Πρίμος Ἄστεος ὁ καὶ Ἰούλιος who was a βουλευτής τῆς Δακίας Σεπτιμία Πορολίσσου. They seem to be both involved in the wine trade, probably importing wine from the southern provinces into Dacia,⁸⁹ and both probably residing in Porolissum, while at Augusta Traiana they must have resided only temporarily for business matters; here, as worshippers of Iupiter Dolichenus they reconstructed his temple. Moreover, at least in the case of Αὐρήλιος Σαβεῖνος son of Θεοφίλος we know that he has an Oriental origin, the wine merchant even mentioning his ethnikon as Σύρος. Given his origin, he was certainly well connected with the community of Orientals from Porolissum.⁹⁰

As mentioned, more or less extensive networks could have been developed also by joining associations,⁹¹ which at Augusta Traiana are rarely attested – this is not the case in other cities, such as Byzantion, or in other cities from the province of Lower Moesia (e.g. Tomis or Istros). Associations provided a good alternative setting for developing and extending one’s networks, besides other contexts, such as the religious one, or the professional one. This way of extending the network was mostly accessible to persons belonging to the lower echelon of society. At Augusta Traiana there are five religious associations coming from the 2nd-3rd centuries AD. In total, these five associations have at least 21 members, with no involvement of women. As opposed to similar associations from other ancient cities, the associations from Augusta Traiana do not record multiple membership of a same person; nevertheless, considering the very limited evidence this might be only the result of the present discoveries, as it was a common practice for some members of society with a significant social capital to be active in multiple associations, even if sometimes only in the stance of benefactor.

A first set of evidence is on the σπεῖρη πρὸ πόλεως,⁹² respectively a company “before the city”, as an altar (βωμός) was offered to it by some of its members. Given the name of the association, as well as the denomination used for the initiates (οἱ μαγαρεῖς), the association probably had a place of worship outside the city (a μάγαρον).⁹³ The deity of their worship could be Dionysos,⁹⁴ as “οἱ μαγαρεῖς refers to those who have been initiated into the Dionysiac rites and meet in a megaron [---]”.⁹⁵ In what concerns the members (not all the names are legible, certainly more persons were members of the association as a part of the inscription is missing) of the association, they are probably not limited to those that are mentioned by the inscription. Considering the fact that the monument is a dedication to the association on behalf of some of the initiates, we have no information on the internal hierarchy of the association, which probably had at least a ἱερεὺς. V. Velkov and D. Nikolov⁹⁶ suppose that from the above-mentioned σπεῖρη πρὸ πόλεως Φλάβιος and Ἡρακλιανός could be freedmen or peregrini, while they assume that Καρτέρης son of Ναννᾶς could have been an immigrant from Asia Minor who became a local γερονσιαστής. The latter hypothesis is however questioned by H.W. Pleket.⁹⁷ As discussed earlier by A.-Fr. Jaccottet and J.S. Kloppenborg and R.S. Ascoug, considering the fact that none of the members bear the tria nomina, that one of the member mentions his nickname, that two others mention their occupation (artisans in very specific fields), and that only one of the members is part of the gerousia it is very possible for this association to have gathered individuals of lower status. Some of them being very probably related as the patronymics tend to suggest (Μουκιανός son of Πανχαῖς and Ἑρμογένης son of Μουκιανός; Περγάμις son of Ὀλυμπιδώροτος and brother of Οὐάλης and Πολέμις; Ἀπλινάρις son of Ἀπλινάρις Καρτέριος and brother of Δαιτειμουνης). N. Sharankov⁹⁸ links this association to another inscription⁹⁹ from the middle of the 3rd century AD. This inscription records a catalogue of persons, where attested is the rarer name Καρτέρης, here as patronymic (Ἀπλινάρις son of Ἀπλινάρις, grandson of Καρτέριος), name which is to be found also in the previous inscription, there as a personal name (Καρτέρης son of Ναννᾶς).

In the proximity of Augusta Traiana, at Cillae, there is more extensive evidence for another σπεῖρα,¹⁰⁰ attested through an honorary inscription which includes a catalogue with the members of the association, and through a dedication of an altar to the same association. I. Shopova believes that Cillae pertained to Augusta Traiana, therefore she considers that at Augusta Traiana there were two σπεῖραι, one formed by foreigners and the other, the one at Cillae, formed by the native population.¹⁰¹

Even though we have opted not to include in our sample the evidence concerning persons from Augusta Traiana attested in other parts of the ancient world, at this point we should mention that in Portus Traiani there is an association of immigrants, from either Asia Minor or Augusta Traiana,¹⁰² named Ἀγγνῆς εὐσέμνοιο σπεῖρης Τραιανησίω.¹⁰³ Additionally, at Ostia a fragmentary dedication¹⁰⁴ to Diana mentions again the term Traianenses, which could be referring to the same association. Considering the association attested at Augusta Traiana and those attested at Portus Traiani and Ostia, the possibility previously suggested of its members having been part of the association at Augusta Traiana, or for them to have organised the association based on the one from Augusta Traiana cannot be excluded.¹⁰⁵

Further evidence on associations come from a 3rd century AD inscription mentioning the existence of τὸ βακχεῖον,¹⁰⁶ that could make reference to an association devoted to Dionysos. The text records the dedication of a xoanon by a Roman citizen: Μάρκος Οὐαλέριος Αἴλιος Πρεσκεῖνος. Due to the fact that the text is succinct we cannot tell if the term τὸ βακχεῖον refers to a private association dedicated to Dionysos, or simply a dedication to Dionysos.¹⁰⁷

Devoted to Dionysos was another association from the Imperial period, on which we have only a fragmentary inscription recording the theophoric denomination οἱ περὶ τὸν Διόνυσον ο[---].¹⁰⁸ Unfortunately, we cannot say anything else on this association as the state of preservation of the limestone plaque is very poor, therefore the names and number of the members is unknown. Such a denomination (οἱ περὶ τὸν) for private associations is relatively common, sometimes the members being grouped not around a divinity but a person, usually the leader or the founder, especially if that person was a member of the elite (e.g. at Callatis: οἱ περὶ Π(όπλιον) Οὐαλέριον Χάρητα/Φιλοκύνηγοι;¹⁰⁹ οἱ παρὶ {περὶ} εἰερέα Τ(ίτον) Αἴ(λιον) Μινίκιον;¹¹⁰ θοινηται οἱ περὶ εἰερέα Ἡρακλέοντα Πύρσου¹¹¹ etc.)

Additionally, we know of the existence in the Imperial period of an association of fullers ἡ τέχνη τῶν γναφῶν,¹¹² the text recording an endowment granted to the association, more precisely it received a vineyard in a specific area. As the denomination points, the association was formed by persons sharing the occupation of fuller, similar associations being attested but outside the province of Thrace (e.g. Saittai: ἡ συνεργασία τῶν γναφέων;¹¹³ Ioulia Gordos: τὸ ὁμότεχνον τῶν γναφέων;¹¹⁴ Kyzikos: τὸ ἱερώτατον συνέδριον τῶν γναφέων¹¹⁵), in Thrace there is only evidence for individuals having this occupation at Perinthos¹¹⁶ and at Nicopolis ad Istrum,¹¹⁷ and from the context an associative component cannot be identified. Professionals benefitted greatly from joining associations, as their networks extended through this, essential fact when considering occupations that involved mobility of people or goods, but not only.

Another association present at Augusta Traiana is that of that of συνποσιασταὶ θεοῦ Ἀσκληπιοῦ¹¹⁸ (drinking associates of Asklepios). While the terminology points to the association being formed around conviviality, as the members call themselves drinking associates, based only on the available evidence we cannot tell if it had a permanent character. Except for this case there is no other attestation of an association with this name, even though some associations include the συμπόσιον among their activities and some have the position of συμποσίαρχης. In this association as well, all of the 12 members were male and were peregrini, and except one person they had a Thracian origin as indicated by the personal names. Except for this network, none of the persons provide additional evidence on their connections outside the association (see Fig. 4).

Lastly, we mention the Εργισσηνοὶ¹¹⁹ who dedicated a monument to Apollo Σικερηνός and the Nymphs; the persons mentioned under this name do not seem to represent an association, Εργισσηνοὶ being probably persons originating from the same village, therefore settlers at Augusta Traiana who had maintained, according to Z. Gočeva, a common cult.¹²⁰ Some of the members might have been related, as the onomastic seems to point (see Fig. 5: Ἀσιατικός son of Ἰάσων, brother of Δορζένθης; Δινίκενθος son of Βρινκάζερις, brother of Τήρης; Φλάβιος Σκέλης might have been the father of Φλάβιος Μουκαπορίς).

All in all, at Augusta Traiana most connections recorded by the inscriptions are familial and mostly pertain to the nuclear family. Even in the case of elite members, where we can suppose the existence of a wide network, as the inscriptions mostly record only once the person we cannot directly connect him/her to other persons. Certainly, we can imply some connections, such as that between high priests, or that between persons worshipping the same divinity, or pertaining to the same community (e.g. coming from Asia Minor). Such an example could be that of the οἰνέμπορος {τῆς Δακίας}, Αὐρήλιος Σαβεῖνος son of Θεοφίλος, whose connections due to his occupation and origin were not negligible.

5. CONCLUSIONS

Following the steps of previous researchers who focused on Augusta Traiana, and especially on its population, the present study offered a glimpse on it. The inscriptions provide only fragments on the population of Augusta Traiana, but with the representation of both the lower and upper strata of society. Most of those who left a trace were male, not only representatives of the local population, but also foreigners, both undergoing the process of Romanisation. Even though most of the inscriptions are laconic and do not offer so much information on the lives and deaths of the inhabitants, some personal histories do stand out, as is the case of [Μάρκος] Αὐρήλιος Φρόντων son of Διοφάνης who from athlete managed to acquire the positions of Θρακάρχης and Εὐρωπάρχης. Other personal histories draw attention through suspenseful life events, or even a tragic end, as is the case of Γοργίας who died at the hands of “barbarians”. Even though not directly stated in inscriptions, one can trace important moments, such as the improvement of the social standing of some families over generations, the case of Αὐρηλία Μάρκελλα daughter of Βιθύκενθος and her husband Μάρκος Αὐρήλιος Τήρης son of Σκέλης is relevant. The networks that result from the epigraphic evidence are mostly familial, but (with inevitable gaps) also religious, professional or convivial, as the case of private associations points. The more personal networks, besides the familial ones, rarely come to the fore, as with the case of Ἡλίδωρος and Φλάβιος whom could have been both part of the military personnel, as the common worship of Iupiter Dolichenus might indicate. These are only some of the aspects that result from the analysis of the epigraphic data, certainly other aspects, such as the members of the elite and their origin can be further explored. Overall, the sources point to a large sector of the population, the visible categories being the expected ones (male), just like their interconnectivity which rarely goes beyond the familial core.
